

We believe that the FCC should not adopt any standard for privacy regarding telephone contact with citizens who have signed Indiana's Telephone Privacy Law. Any standards that are lower than the current standard covered by Indiana's Law would severely infringe on that individuals right to privacy. Prior to the enactment of the "No-Call" List, we would receive approximately two to four telephone calls from various solicitors every day. The telephone calls were intrusive to our lifestyle and were simply unwanted. Please consider carefully the proceeding 02-278 regarding telephone privacy. The Telephone Privacy Law enacted by the State of Indiana is a great law. Any attempt to lessen its effectiveness would deny us of our rights.

Sincerely,
John Jason and Melissa Kaye Helmsing
